Little Kindnesses.
You gave on the way a pleasant smile
And thought no more about it;
It cheered a life that was and the while
That might have been wrecked without it;
And so for the smile and its fruitage fair
You'll reap a crown some time—somewhere.

You spoke one day a cheering word,
And passed to other duties;
It warmed a heart, new promise stirred,
And so for the word and its silent prayer
You'll reap a palm sometime—somewhere.

You lent a hand to a fallen one,
A lift in kindness given;
It saved a soul when help was none,
And won a heart for heaven;
And so for the help you proffered there
You'll reap a joy sometime—somewhere.

—D. G. Bickers

Entertaining the Guest Who Does Not Dance.
In spite of the recent craze for skating, dancing remains a diversion much in favor. Yet there are, and always will be, many who do not dance. The hostess is often put to it to think of pleasant forms of entertainment where dancing is out of the question. Of course, there are many delightful methods of entertaining without dancing, but few that can be planned with as little trouble.

To begin with, always divide your friends into groups when you are entertaining. It is easier to arrange several small entertainments than one big one. Invite the dancing friends in for an informal dance. If you have a phonograph start that going, roll back the rug—and dance. Simple refreshments are all that is needed to make the evening successful.

Choose congenial persons to invite at the same time. This lessens your difficulties. For it is far easier to plan entertainment for eight persons who like each other and the same things than for half as many who don't like each other and have no similar tastes.

A chafin dish party is delightful. Divide the guests into couples, let them draw for partners. Invite them for the evening to a chafin dish supper. Have as many cards as there are couples, and on the cards write recipes for the dishes to be cooked. Then cut the cards in two, unevenly in a zigzag line. Let the women draw from a pile containing half of each card and the men from a pile containing the other half, and then let them match recipes to find partners. The cards should contain excellent directions for finding the things needed in the recipes. One couple could be charged with setting the table, another with making nut tins, another with putting the salad together with making hot chocolate, another with serving the ice cream, when dessert time comes, and another with putting on the table plates of cold meat dishes of jelly and olives and radishes and cukes.

Charades can also be made the form of entertainment in a party where dancing is not acceptable. Of course, there must be plenty of "one-act" plays—old fairy tales, sword romances, fables, and other things that can be used for the prompt costumes.

TESTING EYES

is not a matter of guess work, nor is it a matter of trying on pairs of ready-made glasses. It is a science governed by principles which none but one who has studied the anatomy of the eye understands—no guess work in our methods of testing eyes.

SEVERE PUNISHMENT

Of Mrs. Chappell, of Five Years' Standing, Relieved by Cardui.

Mr. Airy, N. C.—Mrs. Sarah M. Chappell of this town, says: "I suffered for five years with womanly troubles, also stomach troubles, and my punishment was more than any one could tell. I tried most every kind of medicine, but none did me any good. I read one day about Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I decided to try it. I had not taken but about six bottles until I was almost cured. It did me more good than all the other medicines I had tried, put together. My friends began asking me why I looked so well, and I told them about Cardui. Several are now taking it." Do you, lady reader, suffer from any of the ailments due to womanly trouble, such as headache, backache, sideache, sleeplessness, and that everlastingly tired feeling? If so, let us urge you to give Cardui a trial. We feel confident it will help you, just as it has a million other women in the past half century. Begin taking Cardui to-day. You won't regret it.
